The Strange Case of MARY PAGE

The Great McClure Mystery Story. Written by

SYNOPSIS

MARY PAGE, an actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock, and is defended by her lover Philip Langdon. Pollock has been pursuing Mary for many months endeavoring to win her love and her hand in marriage, but his attentions have been very unwelcome to her.

Knowing her stage aspirations, he has, unknown to her, financed her starting tour under the management of Daniels.

On the night of the murder, Mary leaves the banquet hall in the Gray Room alone expecting to meet Langdon. She has been lured there by Pollock, who has been drinking.

A few moments later a shot is heard and Langdon and others, upon entering the Gray Room find James Pollock shot through the heart and Mary Page lying in a faint beside him with Pollock's revolver not six inches from the ends of her fingers.

At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Pollock had invaded her dressing room at the theatre, Langdon had come to her rescue, the revolver had been knocked from Pollock's hand and Mary had seized and retained it. She had put it in her hand bag the night of the murder intending giving it to Langdon.

Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon.

How Mary disappeared from the scene of the crime is a mystery. Brandon tells of a strange hand print he saw on Mary's shoulder.

Further evidence shows that horror of drink produces temporary insanity in Mary.

The defense is "repressed psychosis." Witnesses described Mary's flight from her intoxicated father and her father's suicide.

Nurse Walton describes the kidnapping of Mary by Pollock.

and Amy Barton tells of Mary's struggles to become an actress, of Pollock's pursuit of her and of another occasion when the smell of liquor drove Mary insane.

There is evidence that Daniels, Mary's manager, threatened Pollock. Mary faints on the stand and again goes insane when a policeman offers her whisky.

Daniels testifies that Pollock threatened to kill Mary and Langdon and actually attempted to kill Langdon.

Two witnesses describe Mary's flight to the street from the hotel and her abduction by men from a gambling place near by. Further evidence seems to incriminate Daniels.

Maggie Hale, inmate of a gambling den, testifies that she was at the hotel and heard two men quarrelling in the Gray Room a short time before the murder. Her evidence seems to increase suspicion against Daniels.

DANIELS' PROMISE

LANGDON surveyed the huge pile of mail on his desk with a half rueful, half whimsical smile. Despite the fact that he had worked half the night, his cold plunge and a cup of strong coffee had sent him down town early, filled with energy, and he had planned to "clean up" his letters at the office before proceeding to court.

He had not, however, counted upon the sympathy and the antipathy that the now famous trial of Mary Page was arousing.

Nor had he counted upon the propensity of the American public to the usual formality of signing his name. Beside the letters lay the morning papers, all of them, with the accounts of the trial marked heavily with blue pencil, ready to be clipped and pasted in the office scrap book. As Langdon drew out his chair and sat down the headlines of the topmost paper caught his eye.

DANIELS TO DEFEY HOOODOO TO REOPEN THE COVINGTON

Defying the Theatrical Hoooodoo Which the Superstitious Declare Hangs Over the Famous Old Covington Theatre, Mr. Daniels Announces That Plans Are Now Under Way to Reopen the Playhouse Early Next Month With a Musical Comedy.

WILL ANNOUNCE NAME OF PLAY LATER

With a little whistle of surprise Langdon dropped into his seat and scanned the article, which was an interview with Daniels. Its details were non-essential, dealing mostly with the question of the superstition clinging about theatres connected in any way with tragedy, but the main fact stood out boldly. Daniels had secured fresh backing and was to start again.

With the paper crumpled in his hand Langdon stared out of the window, trying to fit this new fact into the intricate puzzle that had grown out of the death of James Pollock.

Everyone knew now that Daniels himself had lost all he possessed and had also lost the money Pollock had promised him through the death of the latter.

Who, then, was the new angel, whose name did not appear in the carefully worded announcement from Daniels?

Was it not possible, after all, that Daniels had secured more money from Pollock than anyone knew of, and chose this method of using it to avoid clashing with the lawyers of Pollock's estate?

It was not possible, too, that Daniels knew far more about the tragedy than anyone suspected? That he had turned this information to very good account financially and that there were influential people identified with the underworld of the city who for personal or political reasons were willing to put up a large amount of money provided they could thereby silence the theatrical manager and keep him from revealing any more on the witness stand?

Daniels, Langdon knew, was ruled by a very lax code of morals and was not above profiting from the suppression of evidence that had a great financial value.

He had got no further than this point in his soliloquy, when the office boy appeared at the door, a little flushed and anologetic.

"I know you don't want to be disturbed, Mr. Langdon," he said un- easily, "but there's a man out here insists on seeing you. Says he'll wait till it's convenient for you to talk to him."

"Tell him I'm very busy now, and must go into court soon. Ask him to talk to Mr. Barrett or Mr. Rogers."

The boy went out, but in a moment or so returned.

"He says they won't do, sir. He must see you. He says to tell you his name is Daniels and he has come about the trial."

Langdon lifted his head quickly. "A short fat man?" he queried, and the boy nodded. "Tell him to come in," said the young attorney, and smoothing out the crumpled morning paper he laid it back with the others and smiled, a trifle grimly.

Prosperity had already laid its hand upon Daniels—at least his clothes made that evident. He was spruce, dressed, and recently shaved and carried a cane. There was indeed an assumption of jauntness about him that would have deceived almost anyone, but Langdon's keen eyes saw the harsh lines at the corners of the mouth, and the sombre anxiety in the restless eyes.

"You didn't expect to see me, did you, Langdon?" he said as the lawyer rose to greet him. Philip smiled.

"No," he answered. "I didn't hope for anything so opportune. I was just wondering where I could get you on the phone. I've just seen this morning's paper," he added significantly, and Daniels shifted uneasily in his chair.

"You mean about the theatre?" he said. "Well, it's kind of good news for me. I lost about all I had on the Page venture and I was beginning to feel the rocks when this syndicate offered to give me a chance to put over a musical comedy."

(To be concluded)

GETS TWO YEARS AT ATLANTA

Edward C. Flint Sentenced for Violating Narcotics Act.

Windor, June 2.—Two years at the Federal prison at Atlanta was the sentence given here today in United States district court in the case of Edward C. Flint, charged with having in his possession, unlawfully, opiates and drugs secured by forged prescriptions. The jury was out scarcely five minutes. He was found guilty on ten counts. It is believed that this sentence for the violation of the narcotics law will have wide spread effect in showing that the government is determined to punish offenders. Judge H. B. Howe presided. United States District Attorney V. A. Bullard of Burlington prosecuted.

Mrs. Florence Flint, Edward Flint's wife, pleaded guilty to the indictment against her and threw herself on the mercy of the court. Her case was taken under advisement by the court and it is probable that she will be sent to some institution.

Mr. and Mrs. Flint were arrested at Winoski on February 29 by Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue Fred Whittemore of Burlington, after they had secured morphine and cocaine in Burlington and Winoski on forged doctors' certificates. Since their arrest they have been in the Chittenden county jail at Burlington, where they have been undergoing treatment for the drug habit. They were brought here by Deputy United States Marshal Reeves on Wednesday.
